

ARTICLE APPEARED
ON PAGE A13

THE WASHINGTON POST
19 October 1981

EXECUTIVE NOTES

MONROE S. SHAWBARD LABRETT 482 N22

PARTNERSHIP IN POWER

... Joe diGenova and Victoria Toensing met at the Republican National Convention in Detroit last year. They got married in June. Now they're on their way to becoming the most powerful household in the U.S. Senate, on a staff level at least.

DiGenova, a longtime aide to Sen. Charles McC. Mathias (R-Md.), is staff director and chief counsel of the Senate Rules Committee where Mathias presides as chairman. Toensing is expected to become chief counsel of the Senate Intelligence Committee, where she has been working since midsummer as a special assistant in the still-to-be-completed investigation of CIA Director William J. Casey.